1. [redacted] there was a military installation at Number 5 Nan Hao (0589/3445) Street, Canton, in a three-story red brick building with a flat roof. On the street side of the building was an iron gate with a portable screen placed inside so that it partially hid the interior from observation from the street. Stairways leading to the second and third floors were visible from the street. A room on the north end of the front of the building was possibly an office. Despite the screen, a long table and several chairs could be seen in the compound. Three soldiers were seen reading there. There were musical scores and Chinese mottoes on the wall. The mail box on the outside of the building had no identifying marks. 25X1
2. [redacted] several soldiers wearing woolen uniforms went in and out of the building. Inside the gate, on the left, a man was writing at a desk. A military bicycle [redacted] was parked in front of the gate. 25X1
3. North of the red brick building, there were two connected houses numbered 13 and 15. Behind them were two wooden, three-story houses, possibly occupied by military dependents. An iron fence surrounded the entire area. A Chinese herb medicine school (Kuang Chou Chung I I Hsueh, 1684/1558/0022/6829/6829/1331) was across an alley on the north side of the compound. 25X1
